1. The creation of art books with adolescents diagnosed with an eating disorder: Effectiveness, self-esteem, and related factors.

Chaves, Eileen.

Dissertation Abstracts International: Section B: The Sciences and Engineering. Vol.73(5-B),2012, pp. 3298.

This pilot study undertook a mixed methods exploration of the interaction of art therapy and self-esteem in an adolescent eating disorder population. Using therapeutic art books in a group format, adolescents created art about their feelings, their eating disorder, or whatever else they deemed important. This art technique is relatively new and novel as an art therapy intervention. Therefore, this study aimed to look at the technique's effectiveness at decreasing participants' negative mood states and investigated the technique's ability to affect participants' perceptions of their self-esteem. Measures of global self-esteem and art therapy related self-esteem were measured using the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale and the Hartz Art Therapy Self-Esteem Scale, respectively. In addition, the Subjective Units of Distress (SUDS) scale and visual analogue scale (VAS) of four negative mood states commonly found in individuals with eating disorders were also measured. All participants were interviewed about their experience using the therapeutic art book technique at the conclusion of the study. It was found that global self-esteem did not change over the four week study period. Self-esteem related to art therapy trended upward, though still did not show statistically significant change. The SUDS and VAS showed the greatest change after the first group session. From participant interviews, four major themes were identified including art as distraction, significant difference from written journal, increased understanding of others, and art expressing more than words. As this was a pilot study, future research ideas using this particular art therapy technique were presented. (PsycINFO Database Record (c) 2013 APA, all rights reserved)

Ways to rectify

Too many results

- Narrow search by
 - Adding another concept using Boolean AND
 - Applying Limits (e.g. Peer-reviewed, publication type, etc.)
- Try searching keyword just in the Title field

Too few results

- Look at the references of a 'good' article to find other related articles
- Use 'Find citing' / 'Find related'
- Reduce the number of concepts e.g. if you are searching for three concepts, try two.

No results

- Check spellings & Boolean logic
- Use a different database that is likely to include information on your topic

Handy tips for accessing fulltext

Google Scholar

- Single search engine for scholarly literature
- Not all citations retrieved come from scholarly sources
- May include citations with links to free PDF articles
- Some citations link to websites which require payment to view full text

Solution:

- Install & use the proxy bookmarklet to access full-texts subscribed by NUS Libraries

In Google Scholar, search for:

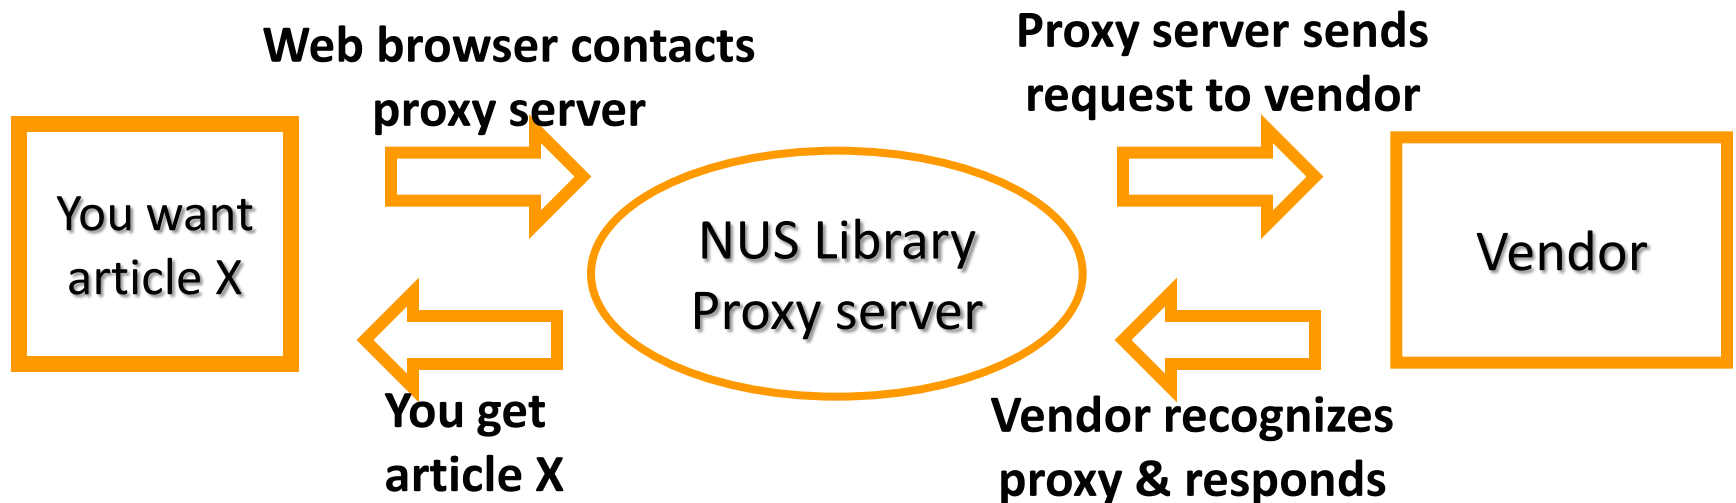

Sherer, M., James, E. M., Mercandante, B., Prentice-Dunn, S., Jacobs, B., & RONALD, W. R. (1982). The self-efficacy scale: Construction and validation. Psychological reports, 51(2), 663-671.

<http://scholar.google.com/>

How does a Proxy Bookmarklet work?

- Inserts the NUS library proxy stem - libproxy1.nus.edu.sg - into the URL of an article
- Authenticates you as NUS student

Installation info:
